The Brotherhood Of Man

Christmas in America has become so many things to so many people they can't agree on what it really is.

But one thing about Christmas is universal and changeless. It is the season when the brotherhood of man becomes dominant over all things that set men against one another. It is a time for kindness and consideration.

It is a time for thoughtfulness and remem-It is a time for men to be aware of one another as friends. It is a time to gratify impulses of generosity and helpfulness. This is what Christmas has done for millions of men and women. It has done this especially in America, where all races, faiths and nationalities have mingled Christmas in America has become a memerial to brotherhood - an example held up for the world to heed.

There is no other place where so many people can l've together without fear - where so many people can come to agreement without violence - where so many people practice tolerance because they know they will be treat-

No one could have forseen this when America was founded. But men dared to hope it might

They relieved in brotherhood.

They wanted to share the power of Christianity with all who might follow them.

They made certain the magic of Christmas would transform the country they had founded each year and remind its people-all of themthat America's power was the brotherhood of man, tac same as the power of Christianity.

Larcenous By Nature

In its final report on the housing scandals of 1954, the Senate Banking Committee came to grips with a truism that Washington usually

The committee admitted that many men are larcenous by nature and are attracted by the wight and smell of unguarded money the way hungry cats are attracted by fresh fish.

It acknowledged that government-sponsored houseing programs had been raided systematically by funny-money operators, who took ruthless advantage of a badly written law with the connivance of crooked administrators, who feathered their nests with cash that belonged to the American people.

It asserted that the funny-money boys and the crocks in office had been aided and guided by lawyers with no more ethics than weasels would have had under similar circumstances.

In short, the Senate Banking Committee issued a completely disenchanted report about the gross dishonesty it had encountered among a great many citizens who professed to be honest. The remarkable thing about this is that mer bers of the committee had to be disenchanted about people who will commit larceny. The basic truism of all money matters is that unguarded cash will be stolen, sometimes by people who never got caught at it before, because they never were tempted.

The secondary truism is that unguarded government cash will be stolen at an accelerated rate under the rule that money belonging to everybody therefore belongs to nobody and steeling it is not personal but impersonal.

The Mendes-France Habit

The strong vote of confidence given to Mendes France this week makes it a near certainty he will round out the year as premier of France. It looks as if the relatively unknown deputy whose first attempt to form a cabinet in the early summer of 1953 was a failure out who succeeded a year later on his second attempt might become a political habit.

For the first time in many years, France has a political symbol that represents something besides the chaos of its splinter-party system. Mendes-France came to power last June, it will be remembered, on a pledge to step down if he had failed to extricate France from Indockina by July 22. He thereby served notice he intended to break deadlocks. not create them.

He wanted action. He was tired of Indochina and tired of the standoff over the European Defense Community. He resolved both issues. He has tackled everything else that came his way. He has created in less than a year's time a new and favorable impression of France on minds that had begun to believe the French people had lost their capacity for dynamic self-government.

Much as his political opponents might like to throw him into the discard, they now must think of the consequences. They would be hurtirg tacinselves and France more than they would be hurting the first premier to have time to unpack his suit case since the days before World War II.

Christmas Eve Services Set For Emmanuel

A candlelight processional by three choirs will prelude the Holy Night service scheduled for 11 p.m. Christmas eve in the Emmanuel Lutheran Church.

The sanctuary, beautifully decorated for the season, will be the setting for both the Christmas eve service and the Christmas morning service. the pastor, Rev. John Bauman, will bring the Christmas eve message on the subject, "The Christmas Journey to Bethleh e m Town."

The Christmas morning service at 10:30 will be conducted by the pastor in the German language. Sunday School will begin Dec. 26 at 9 a.m. with adult Bible classes at 9:15. There will be no morning worship service.

The Sunday School Christmas service will take place Sunday at 6:30 p.m. Carols will be sung by the school members and Christmas films, "The Birth of Christ Jesus," and "O Holy Night" will be shown. The Junior Choir will furnish special music, singing "O Little Town of Bethlehem" in processional and an anthem, "Come Hither Ye Faithful."

Lowell Fleischer will extend greetings to the audience at the Sunday evening program and Lee Schaeffer will show the films. The primary department will sing, "Away in the Manger" and "Oh 'Little Children Can You Tell?"

Marion Theiss will play a flute solo, and the pastor will present the meditation and benediction.
